FRANK E. LANGLEY, Publisher

Are the graduates busy? If not, they have lost a week of valuable time.

Americans will take their eyes off Joffre and others for a time and gaze at their own Pershing.

It should not be lost sight of during the coming campaign that a man named Marshall is running against a man named Fairbanks.

Those Plattesburg "rookies" are prepared for Mexico to the extent that they could be shipped to the border with little delay.

Frank H. Hitchcock will have reason to be just a trifle peeved if he should fail of appointment as Republican campaign manager, after he had put so much time and effort into securing the Hughes nomination; but something besides the aspirations of individuals has to be reckoned with in selecting a man to head the Republican national committee. Perhaps Hitchcock will have the breadth of vision and graciousness to see that point.

Gov. Gates is right. The Vermont of to-day has a noble heritage. There is given to us a state of proud record, of sturdy independence in thought and action, of remarkable freedom from the evils of corporate life, of high moral standards, of fidelity to the truth. Therefore, it is with good reason that the people of the state may assemble during the present year to celebrate the 125th anniversary of the admission of the state into the union. The call of Gov. Gates ought to be very generally heeded in all parts of the commonwealth.

ROOSEVELT'S PROBABLE COURSE.

Events are surely shaping themselves for a declaration by Theodore Roosevelt in favor of Charles E. Hughes for president of the United States. The tentative declaration by Roosevelt of the Progressive convention nomination was the first intimation, of course, that the public knew of Roosevelt's repugnance to running in a three-cornered conflict again. As the days have gone by without change of opinion by the former president, the opinion has gained strength among his followers, as well as among Republicans, that Roosevelt does not really intend to enter the campaign for himself and that eventually he will announce himself for Hughes, who most nearly comes up to Roosevelt's ideas of Americanism. Then, too, the conferences which have been held during the past few days between Roosevelt and prominent members of the Republican organization, together with leading Progressives, have added more strength to the popular belief. Meanwhile whole sections of the Progressive party have anticipated the action of their leader and have announced their determination to vote for Hughes. There no doubt are many irreconcilables who will not, this year, cast their lot with the Republican party but they will be in the minority, once Theodore Roosevelt makes public his intention to support Hughes. Incidentally, the serious situation on the Mexican border is likely to hasten Roosevelt in his decision because Roosevelt is wholly out of patience with the actions of Wilson in Mexico.

SEVENTY-YEAR-OLD HISTORY RECALLED.

History is repeating itself in the Rio Grande section of the North American continent. Back in 1846 the United States government sent American troops into the territory lying between the rivers Neuse and Rio Grande, thus supporting the state of Texas in its contention that the southwestern boundary of the state was the Rio Grande rather than the Neuse. The Mexican government, stung by the loss of Texas, which had wrested its independence from Mexico and still further enraged by the admission of Texas into the United States, sent troops northward over the Rio Grande and ambushed a small detachment of Americans, much after the same plan as employed by the Mexican troops of the present day. Encouraged by that slight success, they next determined to encounter an American army and they came off second best. That was the beginning of the bloody conflict which was not settled until two years later. That conflict the United States won and secured for itself, as well as for Texas, the Rio Grande as a southwestern boundary.

The difference between the present situation and that of 70 years ago is that Mexican invasion of American territory preceded the arrival of United States soldiers on undoubted Mexican soil. The raid on Columbus, N. M., was the immediate actuating cause of the present entrance of American soldiers into Chihuahua, the so-called punitive expedition, in pursuit of the bandits who had flourished without let or hindrance on the part of the de facto government in Mexico City. Continued activity on the part of American troops on Mexican territory brought about the threat by the de facto government of declaration of war. It remains now for the declaration of war to make almost a repetition of the events of 1846.
